Honorono, May 29th, 1884. WE have become so accustomed to the mispresentations with which the professional philanthropists back up their favourite battle | the anti-opium agitation which we do not ery of Anti-Onium that it is refreshing indeed a see reproduced in the Organ of the Anti-Opium Society, the Friend of China, Dr. KERR's admission that the smoking extract is a special preparation of opinm invented by the Chinese, and also that "The instrument used for the production of the vapour is a very peculiar one, also invented by the Chinese, and now being introduced by them ato the United States and England." These admissions in Dr. Kenn's valuable paper on the subject of "Opium and the Smoking extract." reproduced from the China Review, Opium smokers of all classes of society come are no more than the bare truth, and seem very satisfactorily to dispose of any contrary statements to the effect that opium smoking or opium in any form was first introduced into China by the English. In actual fact, if the Anti-Opium Society would but admit or hear it, the truth on the subject is that British murchants trading to China found a dem and, which, according to the well known laws regulating demand and supply, they in the regular course of trade supplied. The key note, however, of this anti-opium agitasion seems to be contained in a statement ollowing that about the opium pipe and its 4309 invention:—" It (the pipe) yields to England revenue of some forty millions of dollars per annua." This we fear is in many cases the bete noire, this the red rag-the British exchequer receives " some farty millions of lollars per annua!" There are, evon, we 4733 4743 4750 4756 regret to say, in England, but too many persons of British birth, to whom anything 4891 4899 4906 4917 4927 salculated to injure their native country or 4947 4955 4963 4971 4979 to diminish its revenue or prestige genuine cause of rejoicing. Dr. KERR, however, whom we credit with a sin cure desire to state the case from his noint of view honestly and impartially, very much misses the mark when he attacks the statements of our local man of ficts and figures, the Colonial Surgeon. It ever a man carefully verified his facts and made sure of all his statements before going into print with them, it is Dr. AYRES. This gentleman, it 5817 his report published in a supplement to the Hongkong Government Gazette of the 24th inst. in replying to Dr. KERR's query as to " What 6042 effect is produced on the alkaloids when the onium is submitted to the flame of the lamp been defrayed by a wealthy Chinese gentleman. in amoking?" states the effect to be " Decomposition—the new bodies formed have not yet been isolated and their nature ascersined." Dr. KERR, on the other hand, conends that "the alkaloids in which the virtuo resides are not destroyed by being 6659 | charred" and again that in smoking "certain constituents of the watery extract of opium are converted into vapour "-- whatever this 6883 expression may mean—and, further, that the " smoke is not smoke, that is, it is not the product of combustion but the vapour of the watery extract." Now looking at matters from a scientific point of view, Dr. Knau's contentions will be seen to be quite untenable. is even were any of the morphine and some fifteen or sixteen other alkaloids, together with meconine and other substances contained in prepared opium, volatilizable or capable of withstanding destruction by the heat of the lamp flame passing over them, the alkaloid so volatilized would be condensed 7891 again in the long cold stem of the opium oine long before rouching the mouth or lungs of the smoker. As a perhaps somewhat modified form of Dr. KERR's contention. i may be argued that the morphine or other active principles of opium may in a state of

We now have in our mind's eye one of the fattest natives of our acquain tance, the typical pork fed Cantonese of south By Appointment to His Excellency the Go- China, who for years has been so fat that be onnot see his own boots, and this man has been an habitual opium smoker for the last twenty years. Then again, we have Dr. Aynes's incontrovertible gaol figures, The smokers as a rule gained in weight even immediately after knocking off their opium. Now it is a well known fact that any persons who have been accustomed to receive morphia into the system in any shape or form, cannot suddenly leave off the babit without entailing on themselves the most serious consequences. It has been shown that opium Norrell -- To avoid delay in the execution of smokers do not so suffer; ergo, it is Irders it is particularly requested that all plain that the morphia is not absorbed business communications be addressed to the into the system from the pipe. This fact alone should be sufficient to show 123 the fallacy of Dr. Kurn's contention. Calmiv and dispassionately looking at the question of opium smoking from a Communications on Editorial matters should be disinterested point of view, we think the excessive opium smoker at worst is but a larceny before, he was sentenced to three months' nuisance to himself; whereas, as could be hard labour. abundantly proved by the brutal drunken 839 Elitor, not for publication, but as evidence of good Russian suitors but some few days since reeling through our usually quiet streets, the European drunkard is a nuisance and terror to all around him. Charity proverbially begins at home, and when there are no more in Europe, then the Chinese habit of opium porderly manuer. smoking, when followed to excess, might with more show of reason be attacked. And even then, if the anti-opium agitators were really sincere, their clear course would be to influence the Chinese not to buy the drug, it being manifest that if the Chinese did not want to buy opium the British merchants or Government them, and the traffic would then once die of inanition. This, however, is a view of for a single moment flatter ourselves, we shall be able to induce the Anti-Opium Society or its secretary to take. Some find pleasure and others profit in the agitation they carry on, and they are not likely readily to give it up. Many of course are honestly convinced of the alleged evil effects of opium smoking, and with the statements of the missionaries before them it is not strange that they should be so. Dr AVRES's evidence on the question, however, satisfactorils disposes of these statements under his observation, not by any wish of their own, but compulsorily. The most inveterate opium smoker consigned to Victoria Gaol is at once deprived of his pipe, and is not observed to suffer any of the agonies depicted in such strong colours by the missiondisbonesty of intention to these gentlemen but they are evidently influenced to some extent by preconceived opinions, and on the other hand, are imposed upon by their pamen who voluntarily present themselves for treatment; these describe a long string of symptoms, and the medical man seems to come to the conclusion that because the na-

ness from which he suffers is the effect of prium smoking. Dr. Ayres's subjects have no volition in the matter at all. They are fuctures by saving the cost of coast and river sent to gaol by the courts, on arrival there they are at once debarred from indulgence in | " heir habit, and in no instance is it foun necessary to subject them to any medical treatment to assist them in breaking off the habit. In fact, to deprive a man of his opium pipe seems to be no more serious

THE TRANSIT TRADE IN KWANG. Mr. H. Kopsch, the Commissioner of Customs at Pakhoi, in his report for last year, says:---Owing to less raw cotton being certificated inland to Yü-lin-chow, in Kwangsi, than last year, the value of the inward transit trade falls short of the figures of 1882. The system of certificating goods, though still only on trial, is however, slowly extending, and new markets are being energetically sought for foreign goods convoved under transit pass. Last year Table VI gave but two articles under the heading of "Cot ton Goods:" Lut this year trial shipments of Piece Goods have been made to test the markets of Yunnan-fu and of Kwei-yang-fu, in the province of Kweichow. The latter city appears to be in commercial relationship with Hankow, and draws supplies of certificated cottons from that distant port (vide Hankow Trade Report, 1882 p. 89.) Possibly Hankow certificated goods can aries in charge of the so-called opinm re- balaid down in Kwei-yang-fu cheaper than those fuges in China. We do not impute any bought at Canton or Pakhoi, though the latter markets appear so much nearer; but for reasons unexplained, the experiment of sending goods to Kwei-yang has so far not been repeated. From the geographical position of Kwei-yang-fu one would centainly suppose that supplies could be obtained from Canton or Pakhoi more expedi tients. Their observation is confined to the tiously and economically than from Hankow, as it is said there is a water route from Canton to within a few days' journey of the city of Kweiyang, while the land journey from Pakhoi is estimated at only 28 days; yet trade appears to follow the more distant route, instead of traversing the direct one. Perhaps when the system of tient is an opium smoker therefore the ill- certificating goods is better known in Kwangtung, the south-west provinces may in future be supplied with imports, etc., direct from the southern Treaty ports rather than by way of the northern ones, and in this manner cheapen manu> freight from Hongkong to Hankow. Two consignments of assorted cottons were packed, and are then conver a overland by coolies, who take about 50 days in accomplishing the journey. The cost of transport is very heavy; and as uncertificated goods are subjected to heavy en route charges, it is to be hoped that the attempt made this year to reach the Yünnan markets will result in a large demand for foreign fabrics. It is strange that no applications are made for certificates to protect goods going to markets in Kwangtung, which is now the only province, with the exception of the northern ones of Kanauh, Chihli, and Sheng-king, whose merchants do not free their foreign imports by payment of the fixed half-tariff rate of transit dues.

A shrub wheat will be standing corn, which it is road-metal of every kind; and our horses Gazelte, toil along a miry track, until at length a stretch of stubble-land, dotted with dwarf blue iris, tempts rider and steed to a gallop. The sportsmen of our party wish ardently, but in vain, for their guns when half a dozen bustards take wing at our approach, and fly swiftly, for such large birds, over the hill before us. We pull up on a patch of ground the homestead in its midst. The path is an irregular and slippery ridge; for the stony reddish-brown soil is heed away from each vine, leaving it in a deep hollow, so that all the rain that falls during the winter may flow towards its roots. Each vine-stock is pruned down to a couple of short spurs to bear grapes, and one young shoot about four feet long to furnish the necessary foliage during the next season. But spring is at hand; and a party of about twenty labourers are drawing the earth back to the roots of the vines, leaving each plant now on a little hillock. Their implement is a broad and heavy hoe, like a garden-spade with the handle fixed at a right angle to the blade. The red sash, short jacket, and sombrero give them a more picturesque appearance than most European field-labourers can boast. They are well-built men, indebted to their blended blood for the sturdiness of

We dismount by the Moorish-looking well, with its circular wall and antique crossbeam. The farm-hands who received us are quite at case with their master and his friends-respectful, without the least servility. The homestead consists of whitewashed buildings with heavy tiled roofs; the largest being a wide and lofty barn-which serves as press-house and as quarters for the labourers. Here also are deposited the implements of viticulture: among them a pile of round mats made of espurto grass. At the time of the vintage these are laid out the middle of the platform, and a rope of who gives way to love-making, or to chloral, esparto is wound round them: A wooden requires to be constantly increasing his done lid is forced down on this mass by a screw in order to produce the previous effect, so, working on the iron pillar, and the first run- our entitle having become hardened with brandy, which is added to the first wine as
